HISTORIC BUNGALOWS

RESEARCH AND DOCUMENTATION

The research and documentation of the historic buildings in Sindh is conducted by performing extensive literature and field work. The research involves analysing specific work which correlates to the historic bungalows in Sindh.

The project began on January 2015, with the documentation and field work of the historic buildings in Sukkur and Karachi. It involved documenting the building by using the survey forms developed, photographs and survey maps.

In order to study the architecture of the historical bungalows at a comprehensive level, a detailed research methodology was developed based on primary resources and secondary resources, researching archival record in the form of drawings and maps, official documents and reports to identify location of the bungalows.

The information that was gained from those resources is then verified and analysed at the site. Zoning the regions on an urban master plan will help identify and organize the data, focusing on the regions that contain historic bungalows. The regions around the site are analysed for example public spaces, commercial/ residential zones, solid and void study, etc. Extensive field surveys were conducted, over the passage of time, a lot of intervention had taken place in the original scheme due to which there would be difficulty in the verification process.

People currently residing in the historical bungalows are interviewed. The history of the bungalow and its evolution through the owners and secondary research would be found. The methodology and approach that is used to document the historical buildings in a city can then be applied to different cities in Pakistan and around the world.
